your computer normally boots using the operating system installed on your hard disk, but it can also be configured to use a "bootable" floppy disk.